Danielle Enblom is a dancer and fiddle player from Minneapolis, Minnesota. She has danced competitively as an Irish step dancer and has studied several forms of traditional percussive dance. She holds a Diploma in Traditional Irish Music from University College, Cork in Ireland where she also studied "old style" step dancing under Peggy McTaggart and taught modern step dancing in Kinsale, County Cork. With a focus on tradition and history, Danielle's performance and teaching are also influenced by her studies of other movement techniques, such as Tap, Jazz, Ballet, Modern, Tai Chi, yoga, and Alexander Technique. Danielle has performed throughout Europe and the U.S. with musicians such as Daithi Sproule of Altan, fiddle player Liz Carroll, Scottish singer Julie Fowles, The Brock McGuire Band, and the Two Tap Trio. www.DanielleEnblom.com
